Zayn al-Dīn Khālīd b. 'Abdullāh b. Abī Bakr al-Jirjī (or al-Jirjāwī) al-Waqqād al-Azharī was a prolific Egyptian scholar of his time and the author of widely used textbooks and commentaries, especially in the field of grammar.

Al-Azharī was born in Jirjā (Upper Egypt) around 838 [1434/35]. While he was still an infant, his parents brought him with them to Cairo. Later he worked as a lamplighter (waqqād) in a mosque, where he began to develop an interest in learning and scholarship.

The most prominent feature of the al-Azharī's works, which were mostly famous in the field of Arab grammar, is that they were written in plain and easy-to-understand language.
