İlm-i cifir - The Science of Evocation (Spirit Conjuring)

Manuscript in Ottoman Turkish

A unique manuscript, author's copy by Niyazi Dede, the Sheikh of the Mevlevi Monastery in Salonika, written in 1260 H. [1844 AD].

154 pages, 21 x 13 cm., cardboard cover with leather spine.

Two other small works are included in the manuscript:

1. A complete copy of Dîvânçe (Little Divan of 28 poems) by La'lî Mehmed Fenâî Efendi (998 - 1112 H / 1590 - 1700 AD)

Only 4 copies are known in Istanbul libraries.

2. A translation of the introduction of the History of aṭ-Ṭabarî; (839 - 923 H. / 1435 - 1517 AD).

Occultism (from Latin occultus 'hidden', 'concealed', 'secret') is a vague collective term for a wide variety of phenomena, practices and ideological systems, whereby occult can be roughly synonymous with esoteric, paranormal, mystical or psychic.

Evocation (Latin evocatio = calling out / summoning) or as a practice of occultism refers to a magical practice in which a spirit being is to be summoned.
